

Transmission of high frequency digital (rich in harmonics) signals on power lines radiates and causes interference to most existing radio services. Signal radiation from the power line "antenna" cannot be controlled (basic law of physics). One more type of broadband service is not needed.